

Presidential Administration of Russia
6 May 2015

I would like to welcome all the participants and guests of HeliRussia - the International Helicopter Industry Exhibition.

This show holds a position of one of the largest in the industry and at the same time constantly developing and perfecting. The show attracts the growing number of exhibitors and guests in the circle of its affairs. This means that international partners show the undeniable interest in the Russian helicopter industry and strive for the future joint projects in such industries as engine manufacturing, avionics, radar and ground support development and manufacturing. I should note that mutually beneficial contracts and agreements are signed annually during HeliRussia which allow to strengthen technological cooperation and open the new markets for the national industry.

And surely, the event attracts a broad social interest and turns into a real celebration for the fans of aviation and for those who are interested in the latest achievements of the Russian and foreign aircraft design.

I wish you a successful work, constructive discussions and all the best.

Chief of the Administration

Sergei Ivanov
